

IV. Sharing Information

- Write a few words to complete a short, guided text or answer simple questions to describe a personal situation.

Task In a language class, write a few short personal sentences in response to question prompts.

Tool Learning Log – Self-Assessment

This example is based on a unit on family with a particular focus on describing people. The tool encourages Ss to reflect on their learning on a weekly basis using a visual aid and can be used for different themes. This activity is based on an evaluation task in Project Based Learning and Assessment (1997, p. 22).

1. On the board, write the following three prompts:

1. This week I learned _____. 2. I can _____ outside of class. 3. This week was _____.

2. Elicit some input from as many Ss as possible and add this information to the appropriate blanks. Make it clear to them that they are writing about this week.
3. Give each S three post-it notes. Instruct Ss to complete the first sentence on one note, the second sentence on another, and the third sentence on the last note.
4. Project an image of a construction worker holding a toolbox (you could also use a picture of a person carrying a suitcase) or post an enlarged picture on the wall. Two examples are provided.
5. Invite Ss to stick the first note (“This week I learned...”) on the person’s head, the second note (“This week was...”) on the person’s heart, and the third note (“I can...”) on the suitcase.
6. Collect and review these notes to determine how Ss feel about the unit and plan future lessons accordingly.
7. Option: Give Ss their own copy of the picture on which to place their notes, placing more emphasis on the individual S’s progress rather than the class as a whole.

Option: Instead of post-it notes, give Ss a short form to fill in (see the template).
